CITY AND DISTRICT

Reference to Attorney Recommended. The District Commissioners have received a report from the computing engineer in regard to the complaint made by Owen Owen of the condition of the asphalt paving on 11th street between E street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. The engineer declares that his office is confident the condition of the street was brought about by escaping gas, and says the equities of the case would be satisfied only by the repairs being paid for by the company owning the gas mains in the street. Engineer Commissioner Beach has recommended that the matter be referred to the attorney for the District for an opin as to whether the Commissioners can-

MYSTERY NOT YET SOLVED

NO LATE DISCLOSURES IN CASE OF WILLIE McCORMICK.

Belief Expressed That the Lad Left Home and is Afraid

Detective O'Connell of New York and the ocal detectives who have been working on the McCormick kidnaping case are apparently no nearer a solution of the mystery than they were before the arrest of the gypsy girls following the recovery of the slips of paper on which the name "Gertrude" had been written. No one seems to know how this paper got into the hands of the gypsies, but the New York police are anxious to get at the facts. The detectives did not visit the gypsy camp yesterday, so they state, and there have been no late developments in the case.

During the afternoon the officers received information that a boy supposed to be Willie McCormick had been seen with the gypinformation did not interest the officers, for they were certain the same boy had been seen at the camp near Brick Haven. It is claimed he is a son of one of the gypsies, although he has light hair and oks nothing like the other members of the tribe. There are no other gypsy camps in this section, and the detectives connected with the local force have abanof a lot of wire valued at $5.40, from the United States Electric Light Company, and by further investigation along that line. Father Mullin, pastor of the Sacred Heart Church at Highbridge, N. Y., who expressed a willingness to pay $10,000 for the return of the missing boy and the arrest of the kidnapers, has expressed the belief several times that the boy ran away from home the same as many other boys have He is of the opinion that he may be afraid to return home.

In order to relieve the lad's mind in this respect, if such is the case, and as a means of restoring him to his parents, the pastor has issued an appeal, as follows: "To Willie McCormick: If you are alive, sick or well, write to me or send some word, that your parents may be spared from insanity and perhaps death. You will not be punished. I, as your father in the church, promise that you will be given back to the arms of your family, and that not one breath of reproach will reach you. Your poor mother is on the verge of insanity; the physicians fear also for her life. Your father is fast losing his memory, and his hearing is affected from the constant anxiety caused by your continued absence from home. If you are afraid of your parents' anger, come to me. Your protection shall be absolute."

Some residents of Virginia have been worked up over a report that smallpox has been prevalent in the camp of gypsies and that five deaths had occurred. Members of the tribe deny there is any truth in the rumor. At the time the detectives visited the camp last week to make the arrests they were thought by the gypsies to be health officers, and the latter were met by several members of the band, shouting "No smallpox." The detectives found the camp in a foul condition, but there was no evidence of smallpox there.

LAFAYETTE SQUARE THEATER.-It was good to hear the orchestra in the Lafayette Square Theater last night. A sense of reminiscent palmy-day respectability pervaded the being of the auditor as he listened, perhaps for the first time in years, to the pizzicato, which indicates the foot falls of an approaching villain, the tremolo, which betokens awful suspense, and the crash chord, which shows that the situation has broken loose in dead earnest and that something vigorous in the way of action is about to ensue. "Rosedale" is distinctly an old-fashioned play. Some of the episodes employed seem very artifichange of custom in theatric writing candetail obtruded here and there, but it Eighteenth Annual Meeting to Be is like ridiculing the manner in which ome antique personage was dressed when the artist preserved his likeness as an the subject is too great to allow flippancy more than a passing smile at the oddity of its embellishments. In that elder day the ed small part comedy were the evidences they have advantages. For instance, they logue scene, where he developed unsus-pected capabilities in a pas de seul and gave a good picture of the country squire, own up to it. Several other good bits of work were thus developed in passing, but searcely enough to compensate for the delay in the action which they were suppesed to conceal. Perhaps players were different in those days. Perhaps the oldtive because they could be well cast: that lofty privilege for which genius often sacent lapse of interest may be due to the education year by year of audiences. It would be a good theme for a debating so-

The small scene, but the prolonged twitterings of feminine amusement finally subsided, Mr. Sullivan's work asserted itself for its honest value. Little incongruitles have so often served to wreck an entire evening's completely over a price tag. The scene in which he studies the Lord Bateman song with Rosa Leigh was especially good. Miss Haswell's recent accident prevented her appearance, and this part was assumed by Minnie Radcliffe, who was, fortunately, familiar with the lines and who came from New York to appear in the piece. Her perwon much approval. A decided hit was Kenna, the character villain of the play. Few of your old-time plays were regarded as complete without a comic "old rasid." When "Rosedale" was written femininity had not reached this bifurcated epoch, when many people, far from deterring her by ridicule, are tempted to applaud and en-courage the woman who has declined to add to the nation's matrimonial complications. Miss McIntosh, with true heroism, sacrificed considerations of personal appearance for art's sake, and interpreted the imorous possibilities of the part in a way that made it one of the really good things evening. CHASE'S NEW GRAND.-With Keith's assemblage of merry-makers, who consti-tute what he is pleased to term "A Grand Spectacular Production," holding over from last week, and with "The Girl With the Anburn Hair" as a new feature, another alluring entertainment is afforded the patrons of Chase's this week. An audience that took possession of the entire seating capacity of the house last evening en-joyed the drill, the dance and the pageant as thoroughly as though they were being presented for the first time, and attested its pleasure by demanding that the cur-tain be raised on the tableaux time and again. "The Girl With the Auburn Hair," ting of scenic splendor," was seen and heard here last season. Her entertainment is certainly out of the ordinary, and with new electrical effects is effective. As regards the remainder of the bill, George B. Snyder and Harry Buckley open the entertainment with an old-time musical spe ialty, rendered enjoyable by the introduction of a number of funnyisms of this year's vintage. Although he has also been seen here before, Charles Leonard Fletcher presents something new in the way of monologue. He "makes up" in full view of the audience and gives imitations of Henry Irving, James A. Herne, Ezra Kendall and other well-known stage personages with refreshing cleverness. The biograph pictures have been elevated from the foot of the program to a place several rounds up the ladder. A number of excel-lent new views are shown, including Li Hung Chang at the Palace of Roses, his summer home in Pekin: Emperor William of Germany, the 6th United States Cavalry charging one of the gates of the Chinese wall and Queen Victoria's funeral procession at Windsor, with King Edward and Emperor William walking in the rear of the gun carriage. A sketch entitled "The New Teacher," given by Sadie Cushman Herbert Holcombe and Sam J. Curtis, depicts a country school in which a very bad boy and a dreadfully naughty girl endeavor to make the life of their instructor They succeed, and incidentally sing several songs very enjoyably.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The melodrama, "The Dangers of Paris," which is being presented at the Academy of Music this week, is replete with hair-raising climaxes thrilling situations and diabolical attempts at crime, with speedy and sure frustrations. Indeed, the play should satisfy the most inordinate craving for this particular specles of drama. "The Dangers of Paris" deals with anarchistic theories—in their worst form-and exploits the doctrine ciass hatred to a nicety. It deals with the revenge of a man who has been imprisoned by a French officer for no other crime than being in love with the girl with whom the officer is for the time infatuated. Upon his release his ideas of revenge are broadened until they comprehend the fall of the entire system under which his wrongs were made possible, and on this revenge the plot of the story hinges. There are several interesting characters in the play. among the most notable being that of Pierre Valjean, the leader of the anarchists, and the hero; Capt. Brigaud, who is assuredly one of the most formidable of the dangers of the French capital; Henri Martin, a poor artist, and Claire Dumont, a flower girl who is in love with Valjean, but who cannot let him know the state of her mind, on account of his fatherly kindness to her. Frederick Douglas, Harrison J. Wolfe, Joseph J. DeGrasse and Blanche Hall carried off the honors in the parts named. Eugenia Hayden made a orceful heroine, and Edwin Dudley and Anna Wilks, in the roles of a comic singer and a maid, carried on a side plot of love and comedy that was interesting. Both sang several well-received songs. Several effective scenes depict the housetops of Paris, the bottle furnace and the Paris exposition by moonlight. "The Dangers of Paris' is well staged and costumed, and was welcomed by a large and enthusiastic audience.

KERNAN'S LYCEUM.-Although the season is drawing toward its close, the audiences at Kernan's Lyceum yesterday.to witness the first performances of the Broadway Burlesquers were large and well pleased. The opening and closing burlesques are up to the general average in entertaining qualities, the work of Harry Le Clair in both being of a high order and laughable, "Stars and Tars" was the opening burletta, and it served to introduce popular songs and numerous dances and comedy situations. The closing piece "Woman and Wine," brought out the full strength of the company, the comedians creating considerable laughter with their antics. The chorus is handsomely costumantics. DEMAND EQUAL SUFFRAGE

ANNUAL MEETING OF DISTRICT AS-

SOCIATION OF WOMEN. Addresses by Mrs. Helen R. Tindall,

Miss Wood and Miss Laughlin, Respectively. The third annual meeting of the Equal Suffrage Association of the District of Columbia was held last evening at the Friends' Meeting House, No. 1811 I street northwest. The audience was composed mostly of ladies.

Mrs. Helen R. Tindall presided and made a short speech, in the course of which she reviewed the efforts made by the friends of the equal suffrage movement in the past to secure the adoption of the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution, under which women would have the same right to vote as men. She regarded the outlook for ultimate success as brighter at this time than ever before and encouraged those who want victory to increase their efforts. Mrs. Tindall announced that Miss Mary Desha, who was to have made an address on "Organization," was too ill to be pres-

Miss Mary Wood of the Washington Law School spoke on "Legislation for Women," and at some length recalled incidents which demonstrated that in many states and countries women do not stand in the same relations to the law as do men. The principal address was delivered by Miss Gail Laughlin, a young lawyer of

New York city, on the subject, "Parasite or Offshoot." In introducing Miss Laughlin, Mrs. Tindall said she was the leader of the Cornell team in a debate with a team from the University of Pennsylvania in 1898, and that Cornell won. In 1896, the chair said, Miss Laughlin made a speech on "The Tariff," which was published as a campaign document by the Home Market Club of Boston, and 100,000 copies were circulated. The lady, Mrs. Tindall said, in conclusion, was on her way to Colorado, with a view of taking up her residence there.

Developing an Idea. Miss Laughlin began her address by stating that some time ago she read an editorial in a New York paper in which women who are in favor of equal suffrage were termed "parasites on progress," and she asked: "Are we parasites or offshoots?" She declared that the effort to secure equal suffrage was the natural development of the idea that in a great republi like the United States the rights of the individual should be generally recognized. While this is true, she declared, of the men of the nation, it is not true of the women, of whom more than 15,000,000 are looked upon, so far as political rights are concerned, as nonentities. It has been urged, she went on to say, that women could accomplish more by using their influence with men in trying to get the latter to vote in ac-cordance with women's wishes than if they themselves possessed the right to cast a ballot, but this, she declared, is a myth. To prove the truth of this, the speaker said that some time ago a committee of in-fluential ladies called on the members of the New York legislature at Albany and entreated them to appropriate $50,000 to build an industrial school for girls. Their request was rejected. A little later a committee of men asked of the same body an appropriation of $200,000 for the purpose of building a veterinary coilege, and they got it. This action of the lawmaking hody
